

ABSTRACT

A material for organic electroluminescent elements which comprises a copolymer comprising; units each comprising a main chain having a trivalent unconjugated organic residue and a monovalent organic residue bonded to the main chain through a structure comprising two or more groups conjugately bonded to each other; and units each having an amino group.